Context: Australia and New Zealand

Support for climate-driven migration

New Zealand
Sample 1 (N = 2539) Accepting 'climate refugees', which are people who have had to leave their country due to the effects of climate change.	77% Support M = 5.25, SD = 1.55
Sample 2 (N = 2293) New Zealand should accept refugees from low-lying coastal nations that are displaced by climate change.	79% Support M = 5.34, SD = 1.43
Australia (N = 5106)
Accepting 'climate refugees', which are people who have had to leave their country due to the effects of climate change.	66% Support M = 5.05, SD = 1.71

Conclusions & future directions

- SDO and threat-based responses tell part of the story
  - Perceived conflict over resources and values may undermine support for climate-driven migration
- Future research is needed to:
  - Follow up experimental and longitudinal work needed to untangle potentially causal links
  - Other factors likely shape support
