

The Role of Schools in Shaping Pākehā Teachers Views of Culture and Cultural Identity

INFORMATION SHEET FOR SCHOOL PRINCIPAL [FOR SCHOOL PARTICIPATION]

Thank you for your interest in this project. Please read this information before deciding whether or not your school will take part. If you decide to participate, thank you. If you decide not to take part, thank you for considering my request.

Who am I?

My name is Avery Smith and I am a Doctoral student in Te Whānau o Ako Pai ki Te Upoko o te Ika a Māui, Faculty of Education at Victoria University of Wellington. This research project is work towards my doctoral dissertation.

What is the aim of the project?

This project aims to investigate how schools may serve as sites of socialisation that shape Pākehā teachers' understanding about their own identities and that of their students. Another aim is to describe how teachers use their understanding of culture in the classroom. Your school's participation will help me learn more about these topics. This research has been approved by the Victoria University of Wellington Human Ethics Committee [27440].

How can you help?

I would like permission to carry out research with two teachers at your school for one term in 2019. I would like to invite two teachers who self-identify as Pākehā to participate in my study. I would also want to interview students in a focus group. The research would proceed as follows:

- Interview teachers twice for about an hour, at a time that is the most suitable for them. The interviews will be confidential, meaning that I will know who participated, but the identities of the participants will be protected.
- Observe the teachers in their classes, at least once a week over the course of a term.
- The teacher's interaction with students will also be observed. Written consent for individual students will be obtained from both student and parent/caregivers. Students and/or parents who do not give me their consent will not be included in the notes I take for this study. The observations will be confidential, meaning that I will know who participated, but the identities of the students will be protected.
- There will be two focus groups of students, one at the beginning of the term and one towards the end of the term. I will ask students questions that allow me to understand their perspectives on culture and cultural identity. These interviews are confidential, meaning that I will know who participated, but the identities of the participants will be protected.

What will happen to the information the participants give?

This research is confidential¹. This means that I will be aware of school name and participants' identities, but the school name and participants identities will not be revealed in any reports, presentations, or public documentation.

Only my supervisors and I will read the data, notes and transcripts of the interviews. The interview transcripts, summaries, data, and any recordings will be kept securely and destroyed on December 2024.

Because this project will take place at your school, others may know the identities of the participants of this research. For this reason, I can't assure complete confidentiality for those who participate in this study.

Participants can withdraw from the study at any time during the term. The information I have already collected I will keep, but I will not collect any new information concerning them.

What will the project produce?

The information from my research will be used in a PhD dissertation and/or academic publications and conferences.
